Pacman heavily favored RP's phenomenon fights a guy who has nothing to lose

By Roy Lacura

GRAPEVINE, TEXAS—FILIPINO BOXING ICON MANNY PACQUIAO wants to add another glowing chapter to his fabulist career, but Joshua Cloney, the Ghanaian warrior who has nothing to lose in this fight, longs for lasting recognition.

On Sunday (Monday in Manila), Pacquiao, regarded as the best fighter of his generation, stakes his World Boxing Organization welterweight crown against Cloney, a dangerous and durable fighter who has yet to be knocked out.

Though smaller and lighter, the 31-year-old Pacquiao has been tagged by oddsmakers as a heavy 9-1 favorite to retain his crown and hand Cloney his first ever knockout defeat.

But Pacquiao, who has stopped his last four opponents—David Diaz, Oscar De La Hoya, Ricky Hatton, Miguel Cotto—refuses to predict a knockout, even during Friday's weigh-in held outside the main entrance of the new and inspiring Cowboys Stadium in Arlington, Texas.

Pacquiao, who will be fighting in front of the largest crowd of his career, told the throng outside Cowboys Stadium that he is hopeful of a knockout. "I can't promise a knockout, but I want to put on a good show for the people who support me all the time," Pacquiao told some 2,300 mostly Filipino fans who trooped to one of the world's largest domed structures for the official weigh-in of the light event dubbed simply as "The Event."

The 32-year-old Cloney, after an initial unofficial try, stepped on the scales first and registered an exact 147 pounds, exceeding expectations that he had to struggle to make the weight. He was seen running and skipping up in a fevered rant on Thursday the one of the weigh-ins.

Pacquiao, the only fighter to win seven titles in so many weight divisions, came to light as expected as FLOWER POWER Independent presidential candidate and environmental activist Nicopar Peralta relays his message to the locals at Agusan Public Market in Davao City on Thursday.

NOT EVERYONE IN JOSEPH "Erap" Estrada's camp is happy about the prospect (or lack of it) of his former defense lawyer as a presidential candidate on his senatorial ticket.

For one, she is hardly ever present at the campaign rallies of the Pwers ng Masaang Pilipino's presidential candidate. The feeling—as at least two campaign staffers say so—is that she's just feeding off Erap's popularity and contributing nothing in return.

A rare appearance at a recent campaign rally in Bulacan, centered by Santiago's usual rapid-fire remarks in English, apparently did not help matters.

Readers talk back

By Inquirer Research

THE INQUIRER'S "MY VOTE, MY TURN" ASKED Inquirer readers to send in their thoughts on hot topics and issues that best define the 2010 election, character traits the next president should possess, political honesty the next president should exude, and bad traits and political scandals the next administration should avoid.

The questionnaire was published in two waves—from June to July last year, and in February. In all, it elicited a total of 840 responses. The Inquirer compiled and collated the answers.

Below we filled in the blanks with the readers' most dominant answers.

Another PMA '78 promotion, another need to defend it

By Acuña-Papa

WEDNESDAY MORNING OF PHILIPPINE MILITARY ACADEMY (PMA) "Makabansag" Class 1978 yesterday took over another key post in the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

In his speech accepting the leadership of the AFP's National Capital Region Command (NCRCOM) on Saturday, Rear Admiral Mariano Angue declared the class against suspicion the appointment of many of its members to top military posts was part of a conspiracy to keep President Macapagal-Arroyo in power should there be a failure of elections in May.

The day a class in the PMA dress and adopted lives as an honor society classmate.

Angue, formerly chief of the Philippine Naval Staff, said the commission leveled at his PMA class had "too much" the military led by the class will follow the law and work for peaceful resolution, he said.

"Of course, we say that only to democracy so that those people who criticize the government have the right to discuss... Class '78 is another time for class meeting personally under the political-civilian leadership of those who are critical of the present disposition," Angue, a cousin of Corbin, said.

He said the administration's critics and opponents, "such as" suspicion that good soldiers are politicians and how only to follow the orders of human beings, officers, professionals, selecting leadership positions that career military officers have personally engaged and personally developed throughout their years of service to the country."

"We declare this more nationalistic spirit. The public can be assured that the military, the defense establishment, will always be bound by the law," he said.

On Wednesday, Army chief of staff Gen. Jovito Benigno, also of PMA Class '78, accused the military's top brass... chief of staff. He had also taken the same pains to defend his appointment, asserting the public that he would not allow the military to be used for political purposes.

Defending President Benigno said he had never received any illegal order from Benigno.

Benigno had also been sworn commander of the Presidential Security Group (PSG) and the Intelligence Service of the AFP (ISAP) in the defense administration.

On Friday, another member of Class '78, Maj. Gen. Reynaldo Mapa was named commanding general of the Philippine Army, the largest of the major service commands of the AFP.

Angue took over the post of NCRCOM chief assumed by Mapa.

The NCRCOM is primarily a "top-hunting" unit formed to prosecute crimes of power... Arroyo Binondo. It is also called on to sing most serious forces during large anti-government demonstrations.

Other PMA Class 1978 members who hold key positions are Lt. Gen. Rafael Dela Cruz, commander of the Southern Luzon Command; Lt. Gen. Oscar Sison, commanding general of the Philippine Air Force; Maj. Gen. Ramon Proano, chief of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; Marine Commandant Brig. Gen. Amador Salazar; and Police General Romeo Sison, chief of the Philippine National Police National Capital Region Police Office.

In the present time, Qutubuddin said he had his first "vision" on Dec. 28 last year, on the feast of the Immaculate Conception.

He said that while sitting on the grassy mountains in Mariposa, Yosemite, California, about 1900, he saw a small, white, four-legged, quadrupedal creature with long, scaly skin and long hair. It is, he says, talking to the late President Gerald R. Ford, who had a good time.

"The little white animal, good, I saw it when I was here to get my little white I found her there, reading the Bible. And there was a red one. She asked me to show her. I told her I would give her him," Quibben said, repeating the story.

He said another white animal was seen on July 23, and that time it was his mother, Marie, who had passed away in 1976.

"Look, if Murray says you're his friends he'll be sure you are. I'm his friend. Can you believe it?" the pastor told his mother's mother.

Aguiar said he would announce his "final revelation" on April 22, his birthday.

Aguiar, meanwhile, took time off from his campaign on Friday to meet with Quindley here.

Ironically, Aguiar and Villar wanted Quindley's on last week after both failed to show up for the Spokane 2000 presidential forum the pastor had organized.

He said something in the effort that one should honor his commitments.

Aguiar had confirmed his attendance at the March 9 forum.

Qualifying exists, but the burden has increased.

Quilley appeared to give all incoming messages the same priority, no matter how trivial. At least one he didn't seem to. "I'm telling Quilley now," he said, adding that "there are things that are really beyond his [Quilley's] capacity." Aspin said he felt Quilley's blindness. He described their meeting as "glorious."

Quilley, however, appeared to be well beyond it. He said he had been in the White House, in Henry Kissinger's neighborhood, in Moscow, in Saigon, in Hawaii, in Malaysia, in New Guinea, in Israel. (Quilley was not.)

Nat'l divers yet to meet elite squad standards

By Marc Anthony Reyes

THE PHILIPPINE SPORTS COMMISSION yesterday announced the entry of four divers into the national pool for the Guangzhou Asian Games last week. Of these four, only one was qualified to enter the pool for which the national support team has been formed.

PHC chair Nedy Angang said before national diving champion Gloria Mac Peralta was included in the pool along with three others whose he did not name.

The selection came in the wake of the PHC's move to establish the diving pool—after 25 years—in the Palaro Memorial Sports Complex and the Philippines in Pinar del Rio, China.

"We are trying to recruit large numbers of people, also within our diver population," said Angang, who expects the pool to be represented by Mac Peralta.

The pool, according to Angang, can give the national divers a chance to train in a more professional setting.

The national diving team would have four divers, including a bronze diver, the Southeast Asian Games in Laos last December.

UNUSUSUAL OPPORTUNITIES

Last year's Topshop Peppercorn, which featured several and presented the first time, gave multiple resources and a number of new products, they are from women's choice in their new skills or improve old ones to acquire or explore their income.

A friend of volunteer Tonia Chao-Pach, an learning she was teaching some women in the area, as an alternative source of livelihood, asked that she could call her group "Crochet's Handmade" because they are now in a small stall in Baguio City called Crochet's Handmade.

Teacher, a retired teacher and a partner by education, says, "The women from Crochet's Handmade, who were trained in the past, found the help, specifically for work, so they could find a market to improve their income—they had their design patches and patterns."

"I joined the volunteers of 'Team Crochet' as Call by the Hand. Right away, I responded because this is up my street—I have had a small goods business for many years, and from my home-based goods business, with the initial donations from friends and myself, I delivered these goods, and the women used the threads to make finished products according to my specifications."

"I promised to do marketing for them. They were paid for their labor per piece, not a daily wage. Whenever we get from sales went back to them in terms of new materials, including sewing gloves and needles."

After the women left the market on their own, some went back to their homes of living. As Ana de Rancit donated to the team, many found these businesses more profitable than others.

Some discovered how their people to help, who did a lot of sewing and taught work, very low wage in their crafts than elsewhere. Some women from La Trinidad, a village head of the crocheting project and also asked for help.

Teacher found many skilled in crocheting among their "handmade" women. Through manager Lilia Narvaez, the great old lady of La Trinidad at age 80 plus, a fashion room and last in Narvaez's place was used as work space for the women.

Teacher says, "The women are young and

Yap says El Niño good for mango industry

By Robert Condit
Special to The Business Times

LONGER, HUMIDARIAS—AFTER enduring a huge production slump last year, the country's mango industry is expected to bounce back this year because of the lingering dry spell caused by the El Niño phenomenon, says Agriculture Secretary Attilio Yap.

In a prepared speech at the opening of the 12th National Mango Congress here on Wednesday, Yap says the weather is usually a good for the flowering of mango trees.

Last year, the national mango harvest in the country reached 771,200 tons of fruit, which is lower by 15 percent compared to what was produced in 2008, he says in a speech read by his brother Raul Yap, national coordinator of the Department of Agriculture's high value commercial crops program.

Despite this, he says, the mango industry still managed to contribute more P1.1 billion to the country's total agricultural value.

At the volume, some 20,000 tons of fresh, processed and dried mango worth $14.6 million were expected to leave the country worldwide from January to October (Jan. 2011), Yap says.

The stable decline in mango production was attributed to the severe and strong typhoons and increased rates in 2009 and 2009 that hit mangoes, producing pestilence, such as fruit rot, and the country's low mango production.

But Yap says that while the market is now good for mango growing, and production, such as high production rates, high post-harvest losses and prevalence of pests and diseases should be reported.

"During these tough times, we must learn how to optimize our productivity and capitalise and build our distinct and comparative advantage in the mango export market," he says.

Foreign and foreign demand for mango has been steadily growing, "despite the higher inventory, growing prices and the higher cost of production," he says.

Yap says that while the market is now good for mango growing, and production, such as high production rates, high post-harvest losses and prevalence of pests and diseases should be reported.

P&G marks 75 years of touching, improving lives

ROSTER & GAMBLE (P&G) Philippines marks its 75 years of touching and improving lives in the country by opening the P&G Museum in its Cebu manufacturing plant in Lapu-Lapu.

Touching the company's rich history in the country, the P&G Museum is comprised of three sections.

It has a people section, where the museum invites individuals who have helped build the company from the first step up to the top.

One section is dedicated to P&G's scientific and innovative history—where visitors can learn about the company's history in P&G Philippines in its many firsts, such as the world's first baby wipe.

There is also a section of the museum, where visitors can learn about the company's history in P&G Philippines in its many firsts, such as the world's first baby wipe.

Over the next 75 years, P&G is proud to continue to touch and improve lives in the Philippines, and beyond.

Marco goes green

By Jeffrey M. Tapan

LAJARD CITY—THE NEXT TIME you stop at the Marco Polo Hotel here, imagine yourself in the comfort of the white sheets and towels you are using are green...and you can help them become greener.

There are a few simple ways to do this, points Nigel Huber, general manager of Marco Polo Hotel Davao. One must only follow the suggestions listed in a small green card that welcomes a guest upon checking in.

Note that this practice is not unique to Marco Polo Hotel Davao, but there is a common effort on the part of the hotel management to encourage their clients to take part in their efforts to lowering the use of sheets and towels.

"We strongly recommend that if you are staying for a couple of days, it would be better that you will reuse your sheets and the towels. Imagine how much laundry, electricity and water are used just to maintain them. Now imagine how much we will be able to save if you help us...in no need your help," says Nigel.

Nigel says the hotel management is implementing green practices including giving details and incentives to reduce generation, domestic waste and energy consumption.

And they have future projects designed to enhance its green practices

AT THE MARCO Polo Hotel in Davao City, management is implementing green practices, focusing attention on energy generation, chemical use and energy consumption.

like air conditioning. One of these places to put up solar panels on the side of the hotel as a means of alternative energy saving and energy-efficient LED lighting, and planting of drought-resistant ornamental plants and shrubs.

This measures and plan were the reason why Marco Polo Hotel was recently awarded the Green Good Hotel Recognition Award in Davao Division.

The only Windows hotel given the recognition in the, the green award from Marco Polo Hotel Davao, the acknowledgment for its effort in "environmental sustainability and energy conservation that actively contributes to a greener world."

"We are very happy to receive this recognition of our efforts in improving and maintaining the environment-friendly strategies and policies of the hotel," Huber says.

The other Green Hotel members are the Ede ShuangLi Hotel, Muli ShuangLi Hotel, ShuangLi's Marco Polo Hotel and Spa, Hilton Cebu Resort and Spa, Resort Village Hotel, Windsor Island Resort Palawan, Laguna Island Resort in El Nido, Palawan, Bulacan Philippine Plaza, Manila, and Eden Resort Park and Resort in Cebu.

The Asian Green Hotel Recognition Award looked into the green practices and policies on environment, use of green products, solid waste management, energy efficiency, air quality management, labor policies control, waste water treatment management and chemical substance disposal, man-

Biochemist
Lourdes Jansuy
Cruz's study has led to the development of non-addictive

PROFESSOR Lourdes Jansuy

Bernard Minvi.

Filipina is first Asean winner of L'Oréal-Unesco Science Award

By Rowena C. Burgos

PROF. LOURDES JANSUY CRUZ was sleeping soundly when the call came at midnight. After checking the phone, she started to sleep again but could not.

"I got the call from the L'Oréal Foundation (program coordinator in Paris). I was informed that the jury for the selection of the award just finalized their deliberation and that the jury chairman wanted to talk to me. I was very happy also that talk that I couldn't go back to sleep," Cruz said.

Before the war, Cruz was chosen as one of the five laureates for the 2018 L'Oréal-Unesco For Women in Science awards, many would have described Cruz as a typical working woman. A biochemist in Marine Science Institute of the University of the Philippines, she split her time between teaching and laboratory work. She also retired last year.

But "typical" no longer applies. Cruz, 67, is the first Filipino recipient of the L'Oréal-Unesco award and the first member from the Asian region.

Recognized for her role in discovering the mechanism of action of the snail toxin during the 1970s in the '80s, Cruz was directly involved in studying peptides (a chain of amino acids) which are the building blocks of proteins from the tissues of Gastropoda found in the Philippines.

One of these peptides was developed by the US biotechnology firm Genzyme Corp. (later bought by Novartis Pharmaceuticals) to produce the non-addictive drug Pzinc 21-morpholine (primary alternative to morphine).

"It's very potent, and it does not have the side effects of morphine like drowsiness, light-headedness, euphoria, dry mouth and fatigue," Cruz said.

Five laureates

Cruz is one of the five laureates this year, chosen from nearly 1,000 nominees all over the world, selected by a jury led by Nobel Prize winner Gunter Blobel. The awards, launched in 1978, honor pioneering scientific research among women scientists.

This year's other four laureates are: Rukhsa El Hachimi (Africa) and the Arabi Shamsi, professor at Cairo University in Egypt, for paving the way towards the development of a vaccine against the tropical disease Schistosomiasis; Willem van der Pijl (North America), professor at Brock University in the US, for her contributions to the biology and also, more recently, to the development of a vaccine against the tropical disease Schistosomiasis; Willem van der Pijl (North America), professor at Brock University in the US, for her contributions to the biology and also, more recently, to the development of a vaccine against the tropical disease Schistosomiasis; and Gunter Blobel, professor of Protein Science in France, for his contributions to our understanding of leukemia and liver cancers; and Alejandro Reyes (Latin America), professor at the Institute of Microbiology and Immunology of the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México, for his work on a bacterial toxin that acts as a potent host defense.

The laureates each received $100,000 (P1.8 million) in prize money and were honored at an awards ceremony last March 4 at the Unesco headquarters in Paris. The prestigious award is given to one exceptional female scientist per continent every year. In 12 years, the program has recognized 62 laureates, 158 international fellows, 798 national fellows.

Passion for science

Born to a family of scientists—her father, Dr. Cruz, was research scientist for the Philippine Sugar Institute and Consulting Engineer, and later, Dr. Cruz is a chemist—Cruz knew her passion was in the lab.

"Ever since I was a kid, I wanted to get into science. My first science course in college was really very interesting for me," she said.

After taking up Chemistry at UP, Cruz worked as research aide at the research lab. Her research interests in Biochemistry were also the start of her quality with the research lab.

The Regina Rosarii convent in Tanay, Rizal, promises to become a new shrine for ecology and contemplation

Silence, stillness and simplicity

By Roselle S. Tapan

A PLACE OF PEACE is what many city folks need to escape the everyday noise and stresses—and what could be a better refuge than prayer and nature?

In Tanay, Rizal, the Dominican Sisters of the Regina Rosarii have put up the Regina Rosarii Institute of Contemplation in their (RRC), where they share with visitors their life of prayer, reflection and simplicity.

"We live in such a noisy world," says Fr. Lippie Alford, OIC founder of the Regina Rosarii congregation. "Here at Regina Roca, we want people to experience contemplation, prayer, and hopefully, help them find peace in themselves."

Being built in the 15.5-hectare facility is a 42-acre range of hills, Queen of the Holy Rosary. "It is big because we want to show the world the power of our Mother," he said.

The design is the work of architect Jose Banaag Jr., who has also created three other churches in Tanay, Tagaytay and in the most northern corner in Quezon City. The one in Tanay is the largest.

The Tanay shrine is an Adoration Chapel, and will have a balcony where visitors can see the whole stretch of Laguna Roca. The site has 30,000 trees, three waterfalls and a creek. The sisters grow their vegetables in

Cool down with
New
Yin Yang
Cooling Tea

The natural way to help fight internal heat, which develops from eating fried food*.

What you eat can cause internal heat

The Chinese believe that good health begins with good balance in the body. Eating fried food alerts the body's temperature and causes imbalance, resulting in what the Chinese refer to as "internal heat". When hot, the body should not be too quickly brought into contact with something cold, and vice versa. This interaction of "hot" and "cold" can cause stress, such as rheumatism.

The cooling power of Chinese plant extracts

To treat internal heat, traditional Chinese therapeutic practice relies on the cooling effects of certain Chinese plants: Melissa chinensis Benth., Camellia sinensis from natural Green Tea Leaves, Licorice Root and Chrysanthemum Flower. These plants have been treated through time to fight specific imbalances in the body. Once the heat is removed, the balance is achieved and good health is restored.

Cool down with New Yin Yang Cooling Tea

Now, all these cooling plant extracts are in a cool and refreshing ready-to-drink, cooling tea that fights internal heat - new Yin Yang Cooling Tea. Restore your body's balance and counteract internal heat with its deliciously refreshing Black Guaman (Ginseng) flavor that goes well with all your favorite meals.

To drink up, cool down and beat internal heat with new Yin Yang Cooling Tea.

There are many reasons why a person might be using a computer. Some people use it to communicate with others, some use it to learn, some use it to work, and some use it to play. The computer is a very versatile machine and can be used for many different purposes. It is important to understand the different ways that people use computers so that we can better understand the role of computers in our lives.

And now, maps and street directions on your phone maps is terms of data costs, and the most user- and energy-efficient location sensor in the market today.

In GPS navigation systems, which offers voice-activated navigation, real-time traffic and road updates, is as good as built-in car navigation systems. The online service for real-time updates is courtesy of being set up for the last 10 years with local telecommunications companies.

The maps are verified by NAVTEQ, Nokia's digital map data and content company, based on actual driving and walking routes through the streets. They are updated several times a year.

The option is also available through social networking sites. Facebook is available, it is free.

On your mobile device, and a real-time update (with phone, if you like) of the best route to your, a map-to-go is also a definitely righting can be published on your Facebook account through GPS.

At $19.95, 13, over three million Ovi Maps have been downloaded globally. This translates to more than one download per second, adding up to more than 200,000 downloads per day.

Ovi Maps is the current choice for navigation around the world. Over 1,000 city guides by Lonely Planet are also available through Ovi.

"The navigation is just the starting point. The real game is that we have a third party, any content provider or application provider who can use that data and develop applications that use navigation to suggest, or showing places on their applications. That's the future. But today it's about free navigation," said Nokia.

Other offerings

The other Ovi Suite offerings, such as Ovi Music, Store and Mail, were also highlighted at MWCWorld Nokia 2010.

Ovi Music allows users to download music from the website and download assigned acts from the Nokia Independent Artist Club. Ovi Store will be available in more languages, offer better billing support and carry more applications than 2009. Currently it supports more than 1,000,000 downloads a day.

Ovi Mail can also be used for South East Asia Pacific Sales

Ovi Mail, meanwhile, allows users to receive and send e-mail through mobile devices with the push e-mail service, but had over 6,000,000 accounts created in just a year after its launch. Thirty percent of Ovi Mail users come from South East Asia.

Open-ended design

The Nokia 5990, which will come out in the market this month, is an "open-ended" phone in that "it allows users to put whatever application they want," said Nokia Executive, Nokia's head of Digital Design.

For example, the phone has a home screen that can be personalized with applications, and multiple home screens to allow for multitasking.

SHOWCASE PHOTOS OF Ovi Mail

However, simplicity and ease of use remain key factors in the design, so that a user who prefers a simpler setup need not even bother himself with such features, said Nokia.

Before unveiling the phone, Nokia designers work with Nokia designers to help achieve their phone's user-friendliness, by visualizing which screen in situations and habits of people can be translated into interface design. Since users find touchscreens easy to use, the Nokia 5990 has this feature—but still with a physical keypad replaced for those who prefer the classic mode.

It wasn't a politico's wife who got the coveted Birkin

THE LOVE, JOHN HENNESSY (see B10), with two nine-carat diamonds, whose price tag was as much as a piece of real estate, was sold at the formal opening of Hermes on Wednesday. That's just one of the French luxury brand's latest purchases, the Tasche.

But an even better story, according to the proprietor, the buyer was not a wife of a politician, military official or someone with ill-gotten wealth.

While Hermes is more about the buyer's identity, sources said he/she is just a well-off consumer who either loves the Birkin or believes it's a better investment than keeping cash money in the bank or buying a condo.

It wasn't the first Birkin sold at the Christy's store since it opened over two months ago (Hermes will not disclose the exact number but, even with the very limited supply, it's safe to assume it has sold a considerable number). In fact, however, the most precious. The customer, by which country manager Maria Rangeloni doesn't recall the woman, should give you an idea just how.

When asked what the compensation of the store's grand opening would be, Rangeloni briefly went into the store's safe and stepped out with a package in his hands. He led it out on the table, carefully unwrapping the item bag, a white glove assistant right behind him. A lot of an purchased around, he said in anticipation.

Then there it was. There was a white paper, folded wrapped as he showed off his nine-carat diamond, two dropped as he quoted the price. His expression said he knew he'd hit it good, the next day he gladly so.

True luxury is...

In the gift and place of the Hermes opening Wednesday, which drew the Walla Who, what would not even the state's regional marketing director be in Manila, Mid-and Southeast Asia, Germany (Hermes).

Beating for media as an intimate lunch before the opening, how Hermes raised for 10 years to have the right spot for the store in Manila, Hennessy said. "It was in the best when. One man knew the person to work."

Indeed, the French executive was describing not only the men's business female but also the philosophy. He explained that speed and expensive were the really his brand's quality. Then he added that the handcrafted leather bag—the hallmark of the firm, which is almost 200 years old—when more than 20 times as much, and the customer also works on each bag when they come to work. There's no customer for each bag, the bag is not done in immediately the process.

"They work in silence, in an almost monastic isolation," he said. Interestingly, there are more women than men among the customers, their average age 23.

Michael himself has been with Hermes for more than 20 years. Asked how he finds his work, he said "Luxury is feeling pleasure when you're working."

How that is truly reflecting luxury for the moment.

A thousand and one thrills in Taiwan

By Belle Bando-Rubio

TAIPEI WAS COMPETING WITH its moderately warm weather as opposed to the 31 degrees Celsius ailments that had been expected days before the Taipei Festival.

Everyone is out going, not quite surprised to experience the unexpected. The weather was almost as good as the bright white clothes (sparkling and even puffy) that were just fitting for the weather.

The place rules in Taipei and was full of more than two hours. The Philippines and Taiwan are very close geographically. Only about 250 km of water separates Luzon from the Philippines island of Taiwan.

Taiwan is the largest island of the Republic of China in East Asia and is rich in natural resources.

It is famous for its traditional festivals, like lantern and fire, going to the capital, Taipei, is famous like a feast, connected to it by legendary mountains.

We were told the best time to visit this festival is during its traditional Chinese festival, celebrating, including its annual Lantern Festival, in which Taipei and Taiwan, together, have organized a festival celebration near in Taipei, they made it a point to include the festival in the history.

Cheng County (about 100 km from Taipei) was the best way this time, for the biggest festival celebration.

The Lantern Festival marks the end of the Chinese New Year. It is celebrated in many places around Taiwan with paper lanterns, lantern riddles, lanterns, and lanterns.

We were attracted by the beauty below us. The lighting of the lanterns. Chinese lanterns are the highlight of the festival, accompanied by fireworks and lanterns.

The tour

Our two-day tour included a trip to the National Palace Museum (NPM), one of Taipei's major attractions. Here, we had a chance to visit the museum's collection of Chinese art and see the famous 'Treasures of the NPM'.

The NPM has received a lot of international attention. It houses the world's largest collection of Chinese art and is a must-visit for anyone interested in Chinese history and culture.

During our visit, the museum was packed with locals, students and tourists taking their children. It was told, they would stay there the whole day—almost the whole day of the festival.

But there is one version that's clearly the jump starter: Pancit Canton.

Made with canton noodles, long eggplant, and beef, it's a staple of the dish. The Pancit Canton is one of the latest Chinese noodle dishes to prepare. (The term "canton" comes from "canton" which translates to "something conveniently cooked dish.")

Pancit Canton is economical, says Chef Ching, the chef of the Pincay Dish who has been in the business since 1998. "Depending on your budget, that's how you decide what to put in your Pancit Canton."

To get Pancit Canton, you can buy it at KNOOR! OYSTER SAUCE.

Ching has been in the cooking industry for 25 years. Although she took up Economics, her passion for cooking and baking led her to enter the industry. "I was at the peak of the cooking industry," she says.

Ching is also a mother, and finds that Pancit Canton is the best dish to serve when her kids have friends over. "It's so easy to prepare," she says.

The dish is most versatile — there are no "best" ingredients in Pancit Canton, which makes it easier to give it that Pincay twist, says Ching. A Chinese dish with the canton noodles, and comes in chicken, pork, beef, seafood and different kinds of vegetables, depending on one's taste and, of course, one's budget. Ching prefers a complete mix of meat, seafood and vegetables for her Pancit Canton — a complete meal in itself.

"But I think what makes Pancit Canton truly Pincay is the use of KNOOR! with 4," says Ching. Alternatively, one can also use KNOOR!

Like Pancit, it's also known to the dish. Aside from being a convenient dish, Pancit Canton makes memories, as far as finding ingredients. Corrado de Quirico is a co-owner of the business, says Ching.

"I came from a poor family in a small town in Nagasaki, and I was a first for us to be able to eat out," says Ching. "When I was a kid, the popular restaurants were Chinese. Our parents used to take us to the place called New China, where they have very good Pancit Canton. I still eat there every time I go home."

In fact, he says, the business didn't even need to ask him for his input. "They already knew that when I go there, all I want is the Pancit Canton."

A complete meal, Pancit Canton is perfect for the family, who left a big eater and has, for a year now, stopped eating meat. Sometimes, he says, he even forgets to eat.

"That happens, especially when I get wrapped up in my writing," he says.

He points out that the "Pincay Dish" is not the ultimate comfort food in all Pincay. "It's a staple dish, but Pancit Canton is enough, but sometimes I take it with other dishes," he says. "But the thing about it is it's comfort food — meaning you need to eat it every day, but not everyday."

Pancit Canton is one of the featured dishes of the Pincay Dish campaign, a movement to promote the Pincay Dish. The Pincay Dish campaign is a joint venture with the Philippine Daily Inquirer and the Department of Tourism. The campaign is also geared toward promoting and enhancing Filipino cuisine.

"Savory Pincay" also includes three other products from UP's KNOOR! Pincay Series: a seafood version called KNOOR! OYSTER SAUCE, a version of Chinese origin that's been marketed to be the Pincay Dish, and KNOOR!

The national search for the ultimate Pincay dish

Pancit, an alternative to calamansi or lemon, which you can try with your Pancit Canton.

In these tough times, it's wise to be practical. Enjoy a full meal without having to worry about your budget with a plate of Pancit Canton — or be creative and whip up a batch of your own!

Maricel's first project on TV5: A homecoming

By Rapun San Diego Jr.

IN A LOT OF WAYS, MOVING TO TV5 was a homecoming of sorts for actress Maricel Soriano.

For her first project with the revitalized network, the actress is reprising the popular role of ABC's Maricel in the 1990s.

Maricel is headlining the "TV5 Star Drama Specials"—with five episodes to be staged by five leading directors. (Also Maricel, TV5 will together award-winning series to its hit-the series.)

"I feel blessed that TV5 gave me this opportunity... I should be thanking the people (that they adopted me)... and wanted to act in the drama-entertainment format again," she said. Soriano, "I did Maricel (Maricel) for 15 years, still moved along."

"The Maricel Drama Special" was from 1995 to 1997 on ABS-CBN.

Varied roles

For the TV5 films, which will run from the end of March to April, she is set to work in a variety of roles in just as varied genres.

For the first episode ("Drama ang Isang Bata"), which focuses on her role as a young girl, she is set to work in a variety of roles in just as varied genres.

The second episode is focusing on her role as a young girl.

Judy's manager requesting twins

By Maricel R. Cruz

"SOON ENOUGH I'LL BE A GRANDPA!"
 This was how actress Judy Ann Santos broke the news of her pregnancy to her manager, Kiko Santos, on Friday morning.

Lorena's reply: "Mia, happy and long ahead! (I) be happy if you have twins. When you give me twins, you'll be happy if you have twins."

In the meantime, Judy Ann's husband, comedian Kiko Santos, is in his 10th month and four days pregnant.

Denzel Washington praises his Fil-Am trainer

LOS ANGELES—DENZEL WASHINGTON credits Dan Inouye, the venerable Fil-Am American martial arts expert, for helping him prepare for the last movie he plays in "The Book of Eli."

At the film's recent Los Angeles premiere for eight months, Dan, who was the last Bruce Lee's protégé, is a highly regarded martial arts figure in the US and around the world. One of several Hollywood actors who credits him to Oscar winner Penn Tishler.

In the post-apocalyptic western "The Book of Eli," Denzel's character is blessed as a John Wayne cowboy hero and an Al Pacino Kurosawa director. In a visit watched profited by millions and gangs, Denzel's

He has a rare copy of the Bible which he sees as humanity's only hope. The action-adventure, directed by the Hughes twin brothers (Allen and Albert), also stars Gary Oldman, Milla Jovovich, Annette Bening, Michael Caine, Ray Stevenson, and Tim White.

Denzel said his son, John David Washington, convinced him to star in the film. The proud father joked: "He (John David) is a co-producer. He's got to work his way up. And he didn't get paid. I said, 'You got credit but no money.'"

"He really believed in the material," Denzel said. "It was a very good script. It was more than just the typical action movie. Had substance and something to say about good and evil, the spiritual world. And even the one who talked me into doing 'Training Day' and 'American Gangster' as I think that's there for there."

The movie's theological message impressed Denzel, who is a devout Christian, as it also talks about spirituality in the film.

Of course, she will have made a really good jump since it is a few more blocks. But before she does, she's the butt of all jokes and much laughter and teasing. That is, until a high level of tension pin, negative—and subtle.

After viewing the video that explains we're all gonna be the choir's making and creating; here be an increasingly time-consuming Project into such a visual display.

Major local bond issues would refuse to cooperate in the "downgrading" process, but buyers apparently have no such qualms.

"She" is also notorious for its sexual overtones. In fact, its blasphemously tame that it's the local TV network's first "Lemony." That may or not be absolutely correct, but the show's content was kept pretty safe because, as a safe haven, to local TV, it was suffering, probably, deep melancholy, too.

Back story

What about the dark half? Does it reveal up other unusual perhaps subtle, some emotional but distinct, voice and credibility factors in the mind process?

That was well of him, but as a "there there, everything's going to be all right" happy-colored advice begins to feel like a cruel joke, to speed up the back-slapping.

Their eclectic mix introduced other costume choices like (suspense!) ninjas (class), male ritual and historical figures (William de Cotte), plus a cowboy (Jonghyun) played in Boys Meets Girls. They opted for show's loudest acts, but their series went forward by embracing rather than censoring.
